WELCOMING THE STRANGER

Loving God, your Son Jesus said your Kingdom is like a banquet: a festive gathering for all people of every race and color—a table at which the lonely find company, the hungry savor rich foods and fine wine, and strangers enjoy warm family ties. Jesus calls us to build this Kingdom here on earth.

Teach us, Lord, the ways of hospitality. Give us the spirit of joyful welcome and the sensitivity to help people on the move to feel they belong. Grant that our tables at home may draw our new neighbors from other lands into a loving community and that the eucharistic tables in our parishes may prefigure that banquet in heaven where all are one with you, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, one God, forever and ever. Amen.

A Reflection to Ponder

Deacon Tony

In the gospel reading this weekend, Jesus has just started His public ministry. He had previously proclaimed his message in the synagogues and elsewhere; "Reform your lives! The kingdom of Heaven is at hand." He had already selected some of his disciples and his fame has quickly spread. A large crowd now follows Him everywhere; observing this, He went up the mountainside and began to teach them. In his teaching, He gives them and us, one of the most profound messages ever given – the Beatitudes.

Now, what the beatitudes offer us is a road map to happiness in this life and a pathway to Heaven in the after-life. The flip side however, is that it also may seem like a death sentence. For it requires us to make a choice between actions and achievements that seem to offer us self-fulfillment on the one hand and a process of transformation that entails self-annihilation on the other.

Take the first beatitude on poverty of spirit which inaugurates and undergirds all the rest. One might be inclined to assume that this first beatitude serves only to offer hope to those who are suffering and a duty to seek to alleviate them. In reality however, it also has to do with something much more basic; it is also a call for self-denial! (Recall that "unless a seed dies, it cannot produce fruit).

Saint Paul expounds on this in second reading when he tells us that, "God chose those who count for nothing to reduce to nothing those who were something." That is why the weak and the foolish will confound the strong and the wise. St Paul also adds that God made Jesus "our wisdom and also our justice, our sanctification, and our redemption." And so, for us, it is Christ and His revelation or nothing.

Consequently, my dear friends, if we are to heed this first beatitude, we must seek to destroy in ourselves, everything that counts for something. We must renounce everything so that "if we are to boast, we will boast in the Lord."

Perhaps now we can see more clearly what Jesus means when He says: "Reform your lives! for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." He seems to be inviting us to eradicate our own wisdom and self-absorption, so that we can find true strength in Him. Then we will no longer wish to seek glory in ourselves but will only seek always to glorify God. Amen.
